The job market is constantly evolving. More and more people are choosing to follow their hearts and embark on a new path. Caroline is one of them. She left the teaching profession behind and took the leap into the world of beauty care and wellness.

Caroline completed her training and then took a big step: she opened her own salon, Envie de Beauté. Here, she offers a wide range of treatments such as massages, facials, spa pedicures, foot reflexology, and shiatsu.

What do you consider most important in your business?

For me, it's all about building strong relationships with my clients. I don't just focus on their physical needs but also place great importance on their emotional wellbeing.

Every treatment is a personal experience. I like to take the time to listen to their wishes and expectations, so they feel completely at ease.
